

Annotated Bibliography

“Auklet.” Funk and Wagnalls New Encyclopedia. 1983 ed.

This article provides a short but informative description on what an Auklet is, and where it came from. This entry was helpful in defining a main term for my research. However, I would not use this as a main reference source considering how brief it is, I would need to go elsewhere for additional information.

Ben-Amos, Dan. “The Name Is the Thing.” Journal of American Folklore 111 (1998): 257-280.

Discovery Channel.com.2006. The Discovery Channel.10 Feb. 2006

<<http://dsc.discovery.com/>>.

On this website I had access to a considerable amount of valuable information. I was able to look at a lot of different topics, and research what was being said about those topics. This site was very helpful for my research, since it allowed me to look up many different things. I would be able to use this site for many projects, on various topics.

Dufficy, Chris. “How to Ride Pillow Lines.” Future Snowboarding. Mar. 2006: 48.

Summary. Was it useful?

This snowboarding article was a step-by-step instruction sheet for how to ride pillow lines. It also included a picture with drawings to help illustrate the various steps. This article was extremely helpful and easy to follow.

Foster, Natalie. “Pedagogy Lesson Plan.” E-mail to Rose Wilson and Sarah Stauffer. 8 Feb. 2006.

In this email communication I received an attachment of my group pedagogy lesson plan. I also was reminded of something I was supposed to email out to another group member. This email was very helpful since it gave me very important information, and it reminded me to do something that was also very important.

Hagengruber, James. "Ex-mechanic questions safety of Silver Mountain gondola." Spokesman Review 28 July 2005: A1+.

This article discusses a mechanic for Silver Mountain who resigned over safety issues. The article then discusses the safety concerns about the gondola at Silver, and why that caused the mechanic to quit. I found this article helpful because it rose an issue I had never thought about before. Since I do go up to Silver once in a while it was extremely important information for me to hear.

Jumanji. Dir. Joe Johnston. Perf. Robin Williams, Kirsten Dunst, and David Alan Grier. Videocassette. Tri Star, 1996.

Kingsolver, Barbara. The Bean Trees. New York: HarperCollins, 1988.

Wilson, Rose. Personal Interview. 10 Feb. 2006.

Basically, the format for the Annotated Bibliography is very similar to the Works Cited Page. The entries remain in the same citation format, and in alphabetical order. The only addition is the brief (3 to 5 sentence) annotation of the source, which includes:

A brief summary of the source
Was that source helpful to you?
